We can call to mind no similar document during time which has been less favorably received in Carland; from this it may be inferred that the anton has taken possession as aterritory of the United States, a even less popular in England than was the annexation of Texas.

The condition of Ireland continues to be the absorbing object of attention. Day after day the distress continues to increase and famine is doing the ense numbers of poor, half starved creatures

Among the Mormons there are some good men and women, who would be esteemed worthy of respect in any neighborhood; but Joe Smith, and many of the Prophet's adjuncts and and subordinates of both sexes, were deplorably wicked. Counterfeiters, horse-thieves and evil doers of every description were harbored among them, and not only their neighbor's corn-cribs were unceremoniously laid under contribution, but fence and growing crops were destroyed, and horses and cattle driven off.

The Mormons were becoming very numerous, and had a municipal and a military organization which were practically independent of the State authorities; and their enormities had required the frequent intervention of the Governor of the State with an armed force. The character of these people was well understood by many citizens of the State, before they were first landed upon the Eastern bank of the Missispip, and it was forescen that this unlucky advent must be succeeded by a wretched expulsion. But it ought to be well understood, and the fact need only be suggested to an intelligent and reflecting mind, that is acquainted with the character of the Mormons was not the cause of their expulsion.—It was overt crime, and the open defance of civil authority.

That this expulsion has been effected in the most judicious manner, and with the least practicable degree of individual suffering, no one may be inclined to maintain. Many citizens of Hancock County had sold their farms for a trifle, or descrited them at an entire loss, to escape the scenes of confusion and horror which overwhelmed that beautiful region. Men who love strife may in some instances have taken their pisce, and the natural and perhaps unavoidable result of all such commotions was exhibited here, in acts of lawless violence and unjustifiable cruelty on both sides.

The great mistake was, in giving them encouragement to build a city, or make a settlement within our borders. But they had been driven fr poot State of Jaypore, by a unanimous vote of the On the 19th ult. Major James of the 77th Regiight, intelligent man, whose opportunities of ob-
